APRIL-JUNE 2018

A black and white photograph of two Camargue horses rearing up on their hind legs. They are facing each other, with their heads touching in a nuzzling or affectionate gesture. The horses' manes and tails are blowing in the wind, and there is a cloud of dust or sand kicked up around their hooves. The background is a blurred natural setting.

THE HORSES OF Camargue
PHOTOS BY ELIZABETH LINDER

This series of photographs was taken over the course of several days in the Camargue region of southern France, well known for its wild roaming horses. The love of wildlife and photography came together in this spectacular journey through the marshes. Elizabeth found the horses before sunrise and then again at sunset which allowed her to capture them in a magical light.

Elizabeth Linder

An American expatriate currently living in Stockholm.

She started taking photographs when she was a teenager in the United States. Her introduction to photography was taking a black and white photography class. She took pictures of flowers, family, anything she could find.

She's spent many hours in the darkroom developing and printing her work. Over the years, she continued to do black and white photography as an expat, living in Zimbabwe, Uganda, Mali and Senegal.
